

Thursday, August 17, 2006

Chip Report: Madhouse Munchies Creamy French Onion Potato Chips

Now that I'm getting all of these free chips, I feel all this pressure to write glowing reviews of every new flavor I try. It's hard being me! I need to be more like that ruthless bitch Nina Garcia who flippantly dismissed Alison over BASKET HEAD on Project Runway last night. Luckily, Madhouse Munchies rock, so I've only got good things to say.

If I were going to devote a blog to any other snack product it would have to be French Onion Dip. I love it so much that I might consider doing kinky things with it. Oh come on, it's better than whip cream. The silky rich texture, the inviting aromatic hint of onion, the cool touch of a refrigerated condiment... Holy shit, I should write romance novels about food! Now that's the perfect book for the supermarket checkout aisle!

Back to the Munchies. My sexed-up author persona would describe them as rippling, succulent, insanely climactic chips. The kind of chips that should come with a cigarette. I love how this flavor captures the taste of a really good French Onion dip. The kind with real sautéed onion flavor — not the imitation stuff, ya know? If you're looking for a truly satisfying crunch, then these are the perfect chips for you.

Of course, like all of the things I'm most attracted to in life, these chips are hard to get. I have never seen them anywhere in Texas. That means I'll have to order them from their online store ... and wait. Cruel torture for such a sweet, sweet — I mean, salty — chip.

Posted by The Chippie at 06:15 PM

Permalink | Comments \(0\) | TrackBacks \(0\)

Tuesday, August 15, 2006

What Other People Did On My Summer Vacation

It's been almost 10 years since I graduated from college but I still get depressed when it's time to go back to school. It's 100 degrees outside but all the kids are heading back to school, sweating in their new fall fashions. It's time to buckle down, set goals, make the grade. Even though my job isn't as demanding as most elementary school curriculums, I still feel like I need to get serious. But I should probably go shopping first, right?